Executive Summary

Adult Parole/Post Prison Violation Hearings and Local Control provides legally mandated supervision to over 2000 felons annually sentenced to 12 months jail or less (referred to as Local Control offenders), administers parole hearings for offenders alleged to be in violation of their supervision and imposes sanctions when violations are found. The combined efforts of timely hearings and alternative custody sanctions to jail averts the use of 35,000 jail bed days each year.

Program Description

The Local Control Unit (LCU) supervises offenders who are sentenced to prison for 12 months or less, but serve their sentences locally. Working with the Sheriff's Office, LCU has the legal authority to issue arrest warrants and has jurisdiction over the supervision conditions for these felons. LCU staff develop release plans, monitor offenders from jail to community-based sanctions and supervise and transfer offenders to community supervision (parole). LCU notifies victims when offenders leave jail. Offenders who violate their parole have a legal right to a hearing to determine if a violation has occurred. Hearings Officers conduct local parole hearings and impose consequences for violations. They can order jail releases, recommend revocation of offenders to prison and make other recommendations to releasing authorities, while using evidence-based practices (Andrews, 1994). This program offer also includes the operating costs of the Mead Building.

Program Justification

The Local Control and Hearings Unit is strongly linked to safety and is instrumental in holding offenders accountable by providing fair and objective investigations, parole hearings, incarcerating offenders when appropriate and actively supervising offenders with practices that research has shown to reduce future re-offending (Andrews, 1994). This unit works in collaboration with the Sheriff's Office, treatment providers and the community to provide effective interventions and ensure that our local justice system operates efficiently. Structured community placements such as electronic monitoring, intensive supervision and residential treatment reserves 37 jail beds per day for higher risk offenders. Further, providing timely local parole hearings and using evidence-based practices reserves jail beds for high-risk offenders.
