Program Characteristics:

Executive Summary

This offer is for 27 alcohol and drug residential treatment beds. Assuming the average length of stay is 90 days, 108 clients will receive treatment with this program offer. While these treatment beds can be used by both men and women, the majority of women offenders are treated in female-only facilities.

Program Description

These 27 additional treatment beds will be located in community-based alcohol and drug treatment facilities. DCJ will determine the most appropriate treatment modalities and contractors for these high risk offenders. Four of these beds would serve Spanish speaking offenders. Seven beds would be available to serve Native Americans as well as other cultures and 16 beds would be available to serve the general DCJ offender population.

All offenders in the programs must receive specific treatment designed to reduce criminality. All treatment providers are required to notify Parole and Probation Officers (PPOs) of milestones within treatment and whether an offender has been discharged or left treatment. PPO approval must be secured for an offender to access one of the Department's contracted residential treatment beds. All of the treatment providers are licensed to treat alcohol and drug addictions and mental health issues. Some of the providers have strong linkages to housing and employment services.

Program Justification

Residential treatment is directly linked to the Safety strategy of treating alcohol and drug addiction. During 2003, 73% of the adult males arrested and booked in the Multnomah County jail tested positive for drugs. A National Institute of Justice report indicates that more than 50% of violent crimes involve drug use on the part of the perpetrator and sometimes the victim. We know from an internal evaluation of residential treatment that of those exiting treatment in 2003, there was a 20% reduction in one year arrest rates (Pascual and Rhyne, 2007). Further, the same evaluation showed that those who exited had a length of stay greater than 90 days and had a 32% reduction in one year arrest rates. NIDA reported in its 2006 report that drug abuse treatment is cost effective, reduces drug use and brings about cost savings associated with healthcare, crime and incarceration. This program offer provides courts and PPOs with an alternative to incarceration and is designed to address the addictions that drive criminal behavior.
