Executive Summary

The rate of mental illness among those incarcerated is two to three times higher than in the general population (Roskes and Feldman 1999). These offenders eventually leave prison or jail and are then supervised in the community, bringing with them a variety of mental health and chronic medical issues. Research indicates that these offenders are likely to have continued contact with the correctional system and that interventions may assist in lowering their recidivism rate. The Department of Community Justice (DCJ) provides funding for services that assist Probation and Parole Officers' (PPO) work with over 235 adult mentally ill offenders annually. This work is essential for stabilizing and decreasing recidivism rates for this specific population.

Program Description

Mental Health Services (MHS) help PPOs access necessary services for severe and persistent mentally ill adult offenders. Special limited services that benefit this target population are not available without DCJ assistance.

MHS provides: 1) Mental Health Evaluations (in order to determine the best way to achieve offender compliance with court orders for offenders who pose a serious risk to the community and to identify mental illness and determine severity); 2) three contracted staff to work with 60 offenders, preparing them for community treatment (crisis stabilization, accessing emergency mental health care, accessing emergency medical care, food, shelter and clothing); 3) one psychiatric nurse practitioner to provide prescribing services; and 4) fifteen residential beds of Dual Diagnosis treatment for offenders who have not been successful in alternate treatment modalities or whose mental health symptoms are too severe for less specialized treatment providers.

This program supports public safety by providing treatment to high and medium risk offenders who require assistance in accessing services. MHS collaborates and coordinates a continuum of social services in a manner that conserves community resources while reducing mentally ill offenders' risk to reoffend. DCJ meets quarterly with contracted partners to ensure that the needs of clients and staff are met. Without these services, many of these offenders would not be stabilized and would likely return to jail on supervision violations and/or new criminal charges.
